

All the tours to Rome were cancelled with the exception of two because of extensive anti terrorist training. We were disappointed as we had hoped to visit the Vatican; we had visited St Peters and the Colosseum on a previous visit so had to be content with walking around the harbour town and market of Civitavecchia.

Next stop Sardinia docking at Olbai. This is a pretty island – the town is characteristic of Mediterranean islands, with narrow cobbled streets, pavement cafes and some very smart shops. The next morning when we got up we were docked in Mahon, Menorca.

It is a very green and pretty island and has clean, lovely cobbled streets that climb up from the shore. Again the shops were extremely smart with up to the minute fashions, plus wonderful pastry shops with cakes and pies in the window that really whetted the appetite. The following morning we were docked in Palma, Majorca when we got up.

We were pleased to have the opportunity to see Majorca on the last day of our holiday.. After breakfast we went out into Palma. The weather was kinder to us today and we wandered the town very interested in all we could see.

There is a beautiful cathedral and old town. Again very smart shops and lovely pavement cafes. We had enjoyed our week on board Destiny very much. We had seen some countries and cities that we hadn't seen before and met some wonderful dining companions with whom we will remain in touch, and who knows, perhaps meet up again on another cruise.

Cruising the seas is certainly to be recommended.
