Poem

Roland Boole (pictured) is a poet, artist and author from Kilburn. He is regularly contributing poems from his extensive collection.

TIMMY THE MOLE

*Timmy the mole dug a winding hole
to keep his family in,
but one rainy day the water found its way
and his family had to run or swim.*

*As fast as they ran the water began
to touch the last ones tail.
"You must try to run faster to stop a disaster,"
said Timmy as they looked certain to fail.*

*They ran up a slope, which gave them hope
and the chasing water seemed to slow down.
They reached the end and could no longer ascend,
and it looked certain that they would drown.*

*The moles frantically dug away on this gloomy day
and tried desperately to get above ground.
They saw the light above and kissed each other with love
and escaped from being drowned.*
