

Pitman Computer Support

Local man Stephen Blake (pictured) left the corporate world behind to become a Pitman Computer Support engineer. After spending 5 years as Head of Sales and Marketing for Nestle Waters, Stephen was ready for a complete career change and fixing computer problems in the local area was the perfect job.

Stephen comments: "The majority of households in Derby and the surrounding towns have a computer and a growing number of professional people in the area are working from home in very rural locations. When their computer breaks it needs fixing as soon as possible which is where Pitman Computer Support comes in. Not only do we try and fix problems on the spot, we don't charge a call out fee so what you pay for is just the engineer's time fixing the computer." Being an engineer has allowed Stephen to utilise his management skills and passion for computers as well as being able to work with people in the local community - providing a good value and quality service. Stephen adds: "Living in a very rural area myself, I understand how difficult it can be to get hold of professional IT support without travelling for miles".
